

MANE SOX INSTRUCTIONS

1. Divide a section of your horse's mane into three equal strands.
2. Braid and tie off.
3. Weave top ties through top of braid and tie off snugly like a shoelace.

Braiding Tips

The trick to braiding is to keep the tension on the strands even but NOT tight. Pulling the hair tight will not improve the look of the braid. It will damage the hair. So how do you make a smooth, tight-looking braid? Skill and technique is gained by practice.

- Brush the dry hair smooth before starting. Braiding wet hair damages the hair, and makes it harder to get it to lay smooth.
- Pull the hair gently snug as you braid.
- Hold over the strands as high on the braid as possible (while still staying at the crossing point).
- Hold the hair close to the most recent cross-over to keep the fold in place.
- Choose your sections of hair. If you divide a section to add to the strand and it's too big or too small—re-divide the hair for a smaller or bigger section.
- Remember that you are not racing against the clock and there is nothing you can't redo if you don't like it.
- Make sure the hair, strands and new sections, are completely separated before crossing over
- Comb the hair with your hand as you go. If you see hair bunching up in places, simply hold the whole braid in one hand while you comb the loose hair with the other hand fingers.
- Use hair gel. It makes rough hair easier to work with and smooth hair easier to hold onto, while keeping down wispsies.

MANE SOX INSTRUCTIONS

1. Divide a section of your horse's mane into three equal strands.
2. Braid and tie off.
3. Weave top ties through top of braid and tie off snugly like a shoelace.

Braiding Tips

The trick to braiding is to keep the tension on the strands even but NOT tight. Pulling the hair tight will not improve the look of the braid. It will damage the hair. So how do you make a smooth, tight-looking braid? Skill and technique is gained by practice.

- Brush the dry hair smooth before starting. Braiding wet hair damages the hair, and makes it harder to get it to lay smooth.
- Pull the hair gently snug as you braid.
- Hold over the strands as high on the braid as possible (while still staying at the crossing point).
- Hold the hair close to the most recent cross-over to keep the fold in place.
- Choose your sections of hair. If you divide a section to add to the strand and it's too big or too small—re-divide the hair for a smaller or bigger section.
- Remember that you are not racing against the clock and there is nothing you can't redo if you don't like it.
- Make sure the hair, strands and new sections, are completely separated before crossing over
- Comb the hair with your hand as you go. If you see hair bunching up in places, simply hold the whole braid in one hand while you comb the loose hair with the other hand fingers.
- Use hair gel. It makes rough hair easier to work with and smooth hair easier to hold onto, while keeping down wispsies.